UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND
COLLEGE PARK

DEPARTMENT OF JOURNALISM AND PUBLIC RELATIONS

May 21, 1957

Dear Alum:

There are so many things you should know about your school and its Department of Journalism and Public Relations that it would take three times as many pages as we are allotted to tell the complete story.

What we have put together here is a simple manual so that you can have a glimpse of the department's activities and so that you will know where other graduates are and what they are doing.

The department is in a new building now as you probably have heard. The first floor of that new building has space provided for a press. When the university gets the machinery and the necessary personnel to run it, Sigma Delta Chi should be able to prepare a first-class publication for you.

We are not apologizing for sending you a mimeographed sheet; but at best, it is designed to do one thing: to let you know what your fellow graduates are doing and to give you a brief glance of that branch of the Alma Mater which should interest you most.

The next time you are in College Park, come in and see us. You'll be as thrilled, as we are, by the new building and its potentialities...and you'll always be welcome.

Sincerely,

Dick Toth
For Sigma Delta Chi

Fourth Estate In New Home

There was a time when the journalism department was housed in the worst building on campus, but today it is a center of attraction at Maryland. Located on the mall, next to the new library, A & S, and BPA, it is $350,000 worth of modern design, construction, and decoration.

To date, only $40,000 has been spent on the interior furnishings, but it is still one of the most attractive places on campus.

The first floor is the new home of the Diamondback and the future press room. The DBK has a large newsroom, the editor's office looks out over the mall, and there are individual offices for sports, the business manager, and advertising-circulation. The DBK domain takes up half of the first floor. The rest is given over to the lobby, printer's office, and press room.

Up one flight of stairs you find the photography laboratory, which includes a lobby, office, printing room for 14 enlargers, a finishing room, three negative rooms, a studio, and a walk-in safe housing 14 Speed Graphics. This semester 30 students have been enrolled in the beginning photography course, 17 in the advanced one.

Two separate darkrooms, for the Diamondback and the Terrapin-Old Line, are finished but without equipment.

Down the hall from the labs is the Old Line office. Alas, these poor fellows have no more room than in the old building, but their new equipment makes up for it in a small way.

Four steps farther down the hall and on the other side you come to the main stop on our tour. Stepping up to the counter, you can survey the main department office complete with sound-absorbing ceilings.

Furnishings are all new, as are those in the laboratories and six teachers' offices. Colors of the steel furniture tastefully harmonize with pastels chosen so as to make each room different.

At first glance you may think that Professor Crowell's office is larger than Dr. Elkins'. By measurement it is smaller, but the semi-circular desk takes honors as one of the largest on campus. A final touch of elegance: a carpet the professor has brought from home.

Next room on the tour is one of the classrooms. These are like none you have ever seen at Maryland. They are well lit, have plenty of windows for air, and the "blackboards" are green. Arm-chairs are of blond maple.

Across the hall from the second-floor classroom is the Mumbley Room, where honoraries mumble or initiate without interruption. This is another place you surely will not recognize. Unlike the old dark Mumbley Room in FF, this bright new meeting seminar room on the corner of the building looks out over the mall. It is furnished with mahogany conference tables and chairs with matching file cabinet, settees and side tables.

Up on the third floor are the editing and reporting labs. The editing lab has three new steel rim desks and a sound-proofed teletype roomette, with steel storage cabinets and file cabinets waist high, in gray.

The reporting lab has 18 new typewriters that fold away into individual steel desks, a long editing table and file cabinet, also in gray.

Down the hall is the Terrapin office. This, like the Old Line, came out a little short on the exchange, but the new office is still an improvement. Next are another classroom and, on the other side of the sound-proofed hall, the new reading room.

Ralph Crosby, the graduate assistant, is the only old piece of furniture that came over from the old building to enter this reading room. It is equipped with new blond library tables and chairs, specially-designed racks for newspapers and magazines. In the back of the room, in a corner, are three sound-proofed typing carrels.

Six faculty offices line the third-floor hall.

The attic is finished but not partitioned or occupied.

After what we've come from, no writing can do this new building justice. You'll have to see it at the dedication ceremonies next fall, to see how student publications and the Department of Journalism and Public Relations have grown to be the pride of the campus.

Building to Be Dedicated

Dedication of the new Journalism Building is tentatively planned for some time in November.

Ceremonies may be scheduled for a Saturday morning, followed by a luncheon and attendance at a home football game.

Expected to participate are graduates of the department, former publications students, present students, faculty, administration, board of regents, newsmen, publishers and public relations professionals, and perhaps the governor.

38 GRADUATES IN '57

By Don Burkholder (June '57)

The Department of Journalism and Public Relations will have graduated 38 people in 1957, if all who have applied for a degree complete their requirements. Seven graduated in February, and 31 have applied for a June degree.

"This is the largest class we have ever graduated," said Alfred Crowell, head of the department. He added that the faculty "helps to place about a third of our graduates."

At least four of the February graduates are employed in journalism or public relations. Ejner Johnson, honor graduate in journalism, is a reporter for the Baltimore News-Post. Joe Byrne writes for a trade magazine in the drug field, and Ed Heymann is employed in a public relations capacity with the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in Washington. The Washington Daily News has employed a former Diamondback columnist, Burton Boroff. Richard Knott, a public relations major, is undergoing flight training with the U.S. Navy at Pensacola, Florida.

The 31 who have applied for a degree in June are John Belt, Walter K. Boileau, Edward Boyer, Algot Brant, Cecil O. Braun, Joseph Crown, Howard Dare, John J. Davis, Katherine Duckett, Philip Fitzpatrick, Hugh T. Flynn, George Goggin, John M. Gornall, John Healy, Joan Heilman, Tollie C. Holtzclaw, Henry M. Houck, and Marilyn F. Jarvis.

Also, Janice L. Kinsler, Harold V. Lauth, William A. Long, William MacDonald, Thomas J. Mullin, Robert Plackett, Joseph T. Ponzio, James L. Schoocraft, James Smith, Johanne Talley, Richard Toth, John J. Travieso, and Dino A. Vinciguerra.

Grads Eligible for SDX

Former Press Club members may be eligible for initiation in the Maryland chapter of Sigma Delta Chi.

Men who are working in some phase of mass communications, not including advertising, may be elected to membership, for affiliation with any professional chapter or with the Maryland undergraduate chapter.

Such former members may write Secretary Robert Carey, SDX, Journalism Building, at the university for information and application blanks.

SIGMA DELTA CHI

Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity, under the pounding gavel of President William MacDonald, has grown by leaps and bounds during the past year.

Boasting 28 active members and 13 pledges, the fraternity is a far cry from the embryonic Press Club which existed when most of you were at Maryland.

Throughout the year, the fraternity has held special meetings at which speakers from the university and the professional field as well were present. Among those who have addressed SDX during the year are Mr. James Squires, personnel consultant for General Electric; James Kehoe, Maryland track coach; and Mr. Robert McCartney, director of University Relations at Maryland.

SDX also participated in the annual Maryland Scholastic Press Association convention held at the university April 6. Working with Professor Crowell, the members of SDX served as guides for tours, and as chairmen of the various clinics.

Guiding the fraternity for 1957-58 will be David Heinly, president; John Allen, vice-president; Robert Carey, secretary; and George Darlington, treasurer.

The new officers will be installed in a special ceremony at the Bonats Cafe in the District of Columbia May 23 at 7 p.m. All graduates are invited and can contact David Heinly for further information.

Pi Delta Epsilon

Pi Delta Epsilon, under the tutorage of President Roger Keith, sponsored the annual publications banquet May 11 at the Knights of Columbus hall in Berwyn.

Diamondback Editor Dick Toth presented 15 keys to his staff members for service above and beyond that expected. In addition, special keys were presented to John Gornall for outstanding columnist and to Chuck Knight for his contributions in the reportorial field.

Old Line Editor Dave Halliday presented keys to Margie Gates, Jack Stringer, and Bill MacDonald.

Terrapin keys and a copy of the 1957 Terrapin yearbook were presented by Editor Roger Keith to Tom Morgan, Pat Callahan, Jane Eble, Bud Andrews, Bill Long, and Jerry Jewler.

Roger Keith received the William Hottel award, given to the graduating senior each year who has done the most for publications during his or her stay at the University.

Dick Toth and Kate Waters received the outstanding man and woman awards from Pi Delta Epsilon for their contributions to journalism and student publications over the past year.

Freshman Carol Applestein was awarded the Coblentz award as the outstanding freshman on publications during the 1956-57 school year.

Prior to the banquet, five outstanding journalists were initiated into Pi Delta Epsilon. They were David Halliday, new president; Steck Brink, Margie Gates, Jack Stringer, and Patricia Hartgroves. All the new members except Miss Hartgroves are from the Old Line staff. She has worked on the Terrapin the past year.

New Publications Editors

The Faculty Senate Committee on Student Publications and Communications has named David Heinly, a junior majoring in journalism, to edit the 1957-58 Diamondback. Heinly will succeed Dick Toth as editor of the campus newspaper.

Margie Gates, current managing editor of the Old Line magazine, will replace David Halliday as editor. Halliday's parody edition, "UM Snooze and Hurlled Retorts," drew many oh's and ah's from everyone at the university, especially the members of the faculty and administration.

The 1958 Terrapin will be edited by John Allen, who will step in to take over the reins from editor Roger Keith. The 1957 Terrapin should be a natural for All-American honors...if not the best ever edited at the university.

The 1961 version of the M Book, the freshman's guide to university life, will be co-edited by John Allen and Carole Bowie. After brief scuffles and skirmishes with members of the student body and the administration over the changes which should be made in the M Book, it was decided that its present format and contents serve the best purpose.

FOURTH ESTATE

1957 was one of the most significant years for the Fourth Estate at Maryland.

In February the student publications and the 8-year-old Department of Journalism and Public Relations moved into the new building, with larger quarters and new steel furniture for nearly all of the units.

The Diamondback won All-American rating the first semester. The Terrapin edition of 1957 is unquestionably the best that has been published in many years and due for All-American rating. The Old Line continued energetic efforts in raising its standards, with expectations of becoming a topnotch magazine. The M Book continued as perhaps the best freshman handbook in the United States.

Many of the journalists and department majors were elected to campus positions of leadership and recognized for scholarship.

The following annual journalism scholarships have been established in the department: Baltimore Sunpapers, $500; two Baltimore News-Post scholarships of $500 each.

The second semester the department enrolled 160 majors and tightened up screening in the sophomore reporting courses, while the Faculty Senate passed new regulations that will raise academic standards throughout the university.

Prof. Joseph Phipps, one of the best feature writing teachers in the country, resigned to become WWDC news director in Washington, D. C.

Jobs for the 38 graduating seniors, who will join the 157 alumni of the department, were plentiful at an average of $72 a week and a high of $100.
